

snowflower and the secret fan

Snowflower and the Secret Fan is a poignant novel by Lisa See that explores the intricate bonds of female friendship amid the backdrop of 19th-century China. This historical fiction piece not only tells a captivating story but also delves into the cultural practices, societal norms, and emotional depth of its characters. The narrative centers around the lifelong friendship between two women, Lily and Snowflower, who communicate through a secret writing system known as nu shu, used exclusively by women.

Overview of the Novel

Published in 2005, "Snowflower and the Secret Fan" reflects on the complexities of female relationships in a repressive society. The novel is set in Hunan province and spans several decades, offering readers a glimpse into the lives of women who navigate the challenges of foot-binding, marriage, and motherhood.

Key Themes

- Friendship: At its core, the novel is about the deep bond between Lily and Snowflower. It illustrates how their friendship provides solace and strength in a world that often marginalizes women.
- Cultural Practices: The practice of foot-binding serves as a significant cultural element in the story, symbolizing the societal expectations placed on women. The physical and emotional pain associated with it is a recurring theme throughout the narrative.
- Communication: The use of nu shu, a secret script, highlights the importance of communication among women. It reflects their desire for a voice in a patriarchal society and demonstrates how they find ways to express their innermost thoughts and feelings.
- Tradition vs. Change: The novel contrasts traditional practices with the emerging changes in society, particularly as the story unfolds into the 20th century. It invites readers to consider the impact of social change on women's lives.

Character Analysis

Lily

Lily is the protagonist of the story, a girl born into a family with a long line of foot-bound women. Her character evolves throughout the novel, showcasing her resilience and strength. Initially, she is a product of her environment, but as she faces various challenges, she learns to assert her identity and desires.

Snowflower

Snowflower is Lily's closest friend and confidante. Their bond is tested by societal expectations and personal hardships. Snowflower's character embodies the complexities of friendship—loyalty, betrayal, and ultimately, sacrifice.

Supporting Characters

- Lily's Mother: Represents the traditional expectations placed on women, particularly regarding foot-binding and marriage.
- Snowflower's Family: Their dynamics reflect the societal pressures women face and their roles within the family structure.

Historical Context

"Snowflower and the Secret Fan" is deeply rooted in the historical context of China during the 19th century. The practice of foot-binding, which began in the Song Dynasty, became a symbol of beauty and status. This painful tradition not only restricted women's mobility but also reinforced patriarchal control over their lives.

Foot-Binding

- Origins: Foot-binding began in the Song Dynasty as a means to enhance beauty. It became a widespread practice among the upper classes.
- Process: The process involved tightly binding the feet of young girls to alter their shape, often resulting in lifelong pain and disability.
- Symbolism: Foot-binding is a central symbol in the novel, representing the constraints placed on women and their struggle against societal norms.

Nu Shu

Nu shu is a fascinating aspect of the novel that serves as a secret language used by women in Hunan province. It allowed women to communicate in a society where their voices were often silenced.

- History: Nu shu was created by women as a way to express their thoughts and feelings without the influence of men.
- Usage: It was often used in letters, poetry, and stories shared among friends, thereby fostering a sense of community and understanding.

Plot Summary

The novel begins with the childhood of Lily and Snowflower, detailing their experiences with foot-binding and the formation of their friendship. They meet as young girls and form a deep bond through shared experiences and the use of nu shu. As they grow older, they navigate the complexities of marriage, motherhood, and societal expectations.
