Theological Foundations of the Supernatural Power of God

The supernatural power of God is rooted in the belief that God is omnipotent and actively involved in the world beyond natural laws. This power is often described as the divine energy or force that enables miracles, healings, prophetic revelations, and spiritual authority. Theologically, it is grounded in scripture as a manifestation of God's presence and action through the Holy Spirit. Understanding this foundation is essential to grasping how the supernatural power operates within the lives of believers and the Church at large.

Nature of God's Power

God's power is infinite, transcending human understanding and natural constraints. It is not limited by physical laws or human ability, which allows for miraculous interventions. This power is often described as creative, sustaining, and redemptive, highlighting its role in both creation and ongoing spiritual renewal.

Role of the Holy Spirit

The Holy Spirit is the primary agent through which God's supernatural power is expressed. According to biblical teachings, the Spirit empowers believers to perform acts that demonstrate God's glory and authority. This includes gifts such as healing, prophecy, and speaking in tongues, which are signs of the Spirit's active presence.
