Understanding the Current Wealth Transfer

The current wealth transfer is primarily driven by the aging population of baby boomers, born between 1946 and 1964. As this generation ages, they will pass on their wealth to their heirs, significantly impacting wealth distribution in the process. This transition is already in motion, and understanding the dynamics of this transfer is crucial for both those who will inherit wealth and those looking to manage their financial futures.

The Numbers Behind the Transfer

Recent studies indicate that:

- Approximately 10,000 baby boomers retire every day in the United States.
- By 2030, all baby boomers will be over 65 years old.

- The total value of assets being passed down is projected to reach $68 trillion by 2030.

This staggering amount of money includes various forms of wealth, such as real estate, stocks, bonds, and businesses. The implications are profound, not only for the heirs but also for the economy at large.
