The Origins of Wedding Rings

The tradition of wearing wedding rings dates back to ancient civilizations. The earliest known use of wedding rings can be traced to the Egyptians, who believed that the circle represented eternity, a symbol of everlasting love. They crafted rings from materials available to them, such as reeds and leather. Later, the Romans adopted this practice, but they added their own spin to the rings.

Ancient Egypt: A Symbol of Eternity

In ancient Egypt, wedding rings were often made from braided reeds or leather. The Egyptians believed that the ring was a symbol of eternal love and commitment. They also believed that the vein in the ring finger was connected directly to the heart, further solidifying the idea that wedding rings were a representation of love.

Ancient Rome: The Beginning of Gold Rings
