This article will delve into what the NBA represents in the business world, its structure, revenue generation, global influence, and the significance of its brand.

Understanding the NBA as a Business Entity

The NBA was founded in New York City in 1946 and has grown from a small league to one of the most prominent professional sports organizations globally. Its business model is complex and multifaceted, encompassing various revenue streams and strategic partnerships.

The Structure of the NBA

The NBA consists of 30 teams, divided into two conferences: the Eastern Conference and the Western Conference. Each team operates as a separate business entity, but they collectively adhere to the NBA's overarching policies and governance.

1. Team Ownership: Each team is owned by an individual or a group of investors. Ownership can significantly affect a team's operational strategy and financial performance.
