The Foundation and Purpose of the World Mission Society Church of God Rules

The rules of the World Mission Society Church of God are rooted in the church's interpretation of the Bible and its commitment to living a life aligned with divine teachings. These regulations are designed to create a unified and disciplined community that reflects the church's spiritual ideals. The foundation of these rules lies in the belief in God the Mother and God the Father, which is central to the church's theology. By following these rules, members aim to cultivate a closer relationship with God and contribute to the church's global mission. The purpose of the rules extends beyond mere compliance; they serve as a roadmap for spiritual development and communal harmony.

Core Doctrinal Rules and Beliefs

The doctrinal rules of the World Mission Society Church of God emphasize faith in God the Mother and God the Father, which distinguishes the church from many other Christian denominations. These rules are based on a literal interpretation of the Bible, particularly focusing on the Old and New Testaments to support the church's unique theological perspectives.

Belief in God the Mother and God the Father

One of the most significant doctrinal rules is the belief that God exists as both a Father and a Mother. This belief shapes the church's worship and teachings and is considered essential for salvation. Members are encouraged to understand and accept this dual nature of God as revealed through biblical prophecy.

Observance of the Sabbath and Festivals

The church strictly observes the Sabbath on Saturday, following the Fourth Commandment. Additionally, it celebrates biblical festivals such as the Passover, the Feast of Unleavened Bread, and the Feast of Tabernacles, which are seen as vital expressions of faith and obedience to God's commandments.

- Faith in God the Mother and God the Father
- Strict observance of the Sabbath
- Celebration of biblical festivals
- Adherence to biblical teachings on salvation and repentance

Worship Practices and Ritual Guidelines

Worship in the World Mission Society Church of God is characterized by reverence, order, and adherence to scriptural instructions. The rules governing worship practices ensure that services are conducted in a manner that honors God and fosters spiritual growth among members.

Structure of Worship Services

Worship services are typically held weekly on the Sabbath and include prayers, hymns, Bible readings, and sermons. Members are expected to participate actively and maintain a respectful and humble demeanor during services. The rules emphasize punctuality, proper attire, and focused attention to the messages delivered.

Rituals and Ceremonies

Rituals such as the Holy Communion and water baptism are performed in accordance with biblical instructions. The Holy Communion, in particular, is observed as a sacred event that commemorates the sacrifice of Jesus Christ and the new covenant established through God the Mother and God the Father.

Membership Responsibilities and Ethical Conduct

Members of the World Mission Society Church of God are expected to adhere to a set of ethical guidelines that reflect the church's values of love, humility, and service. These rules govern personal behavior, interpersonal relationships, and responsibilities within the church community.

Personal Conduct and Morality

Members must maintain a lifestyle consistent with biblical teachings, which includes honesty, integrity, and abstaining from behaviors considered sinful or harmful. The church promotes moral purity, including prohibitions against substance abuse, gossip, and other conduct that could disrupt community harmony.

Responsibilities Within the Church

Active participation in church activities, support for fellow members, and adherence to leadership decisions are key responsibilities. Members are encouraged to contribute to the church's mission through volunteer work, attendance, and spiritual encouragement.

Community Guidelines and Social Interaction

The World Mission Society Church of God places significant emphasis on community unity and mutual respect. Its rules concerning social interaction are designed to foster a supportive and loving environment among members.

Respect and Support Among Members

Members are encouraged to treat one another with kindness, patience, and respect, reflecting the church's teaching of loving one's neighbor. Conflict resolution is guided by principles of forgiveness and humility.

Family and Social Life

The church supports strong family values and encourages members to uphold these values within their homes and social circles. Rules related to family life promote harmony, respect for parents and elders, and nurturing relationships based on Christian love.

Missionary Work and Evangelism Rules

Evangelism and missionary work are central to the World Mission Society Church of God's global outreach. The rules governing these activities ensure that the church's message is shared respectfully and effectively worldwide.

Guidelines for Evangelism

Members involved in missionary work are expected to follow the church's doctrinal teachings accurately and to approach evangelism with humility and respect for different cultures and beliefs. The rules emphasize the importance of living as an example of the church's values.

Global Mission and Service

The church organizes various missionary activities, including humanitarian aid and educational programs, guided by the principle of serving others as an expression of faith. These efforts are conducted under a strict code of conduct to maintain the church's reputation and integrity.

1. Adherence to doctrinal accuracy in teachings
2. Respect for cultural diversity during missionary work
3. Commitment to service and humanitarian aid
4. Maintaining ethical behavior in all evangelistic activities
